BOSTON (CBS) – Odin Lloyd’s family is trying to get any money former Patriots football star Aaron Hernandez might still have.

The family’s attorney, Douglas Sheff, said Lloyd’s mother lost more than just a son when Hernandez shot him to death in 2013. He said she lost a big part of her financial support.

“It’s easy to forget about people like Ursula Ward,” said Sheff, who added she has “huge hurdles to overcome.”

He was back in court with new urgency, fighting to move her civil case. Sheff filed a motion for summary judgement. It asks the judge to skip past the part of the trial that would determine Hernandez’s guilt or liability, and go straight to the business of searching for the ex-NFL player’s money and assets.

Hernandez's attorney, John Fitzpatrick, said the civil case should not get to a summary judgement, because Hernandez has yet to stand trial for two Boston murders next month.

Fitzpatrick also raised concerns about how the case could impact Hernandez's appeal in the Odin Lloyd murder conviction. "The stakes could not be higher, and it's a pending first degree murder appeal at that," said Fitzpatrick.
